

Protect Your Right to Hunt and Fish

The Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership (TRCP) is a nonprofit organization supported by leaders from many of the country's top hunting, fishing and conservation groups.

The TRCP's mission is to protect wildlife habitat and guarantee affordable access for sportsmen and women. The TRCP was recently endorsed by the IAM Executive Council.

"The TRCP is notable for its common-sense approach to conservation and its deep respect for this country's outdoor and sporting traditions," said IP Tom Buffenbarger. "Many of our members, both men and women, are avid hunters, campers, hikers and anglers. Membership in the TRCP is free. All IAM members who enjoy fishing or outdoor activities should become a member."

TRCP members are part of a grassroots legislative coalition that uses its collective strength to educate the nation's political leaders and wildlife managers about the importance of preserving America's outdoor heritage. More than 100,000 individuals and 1,400 clubs and organizations, including labor unions, give the TRCP the voice to win on these issues.

A top TRCP priority is federal "Open Fields" legislation, which would open more than 20 million acres of private land to public access through voluntary programs modeled after similar programs in South Dakota, Kansas and Montana.

Access to quality places to hunt and fish has become a serious problem. The TRCP's top priority is guaranteeing America's sportsmen and women will always have access to quality places to hunt and fish. We will fulfill that promise by working to guarantee:

- Access – TRCP will work to ensure America's hunting lands and fishable waters remain affordable, open and accessible.
- Quality Habitat – TRCP will make certain fish and wildlife habitat critical to maintaining healthy game populations is conserved.
- Better Funding – TRCP will seek to secure the money needed to properly fund our nation's fish and wildlife management programs.
